DEAR ABBIE

Dear Abbie,

Now that it is Springtime there are lots of bugs around. I am very interested in bugs and like to capture bugs and put them in a jar. I've been told this isn't a good idea. What should I do?

Dear Bug Enthusiast,

It would be a better idea to get a book on insects to read about the bugs. Bugs should be left in nature where they help to clean the environment and can remain safe rather than be stuck in a jar.

Sincerely, Abbie

CHICKEN SCOOP

The chickens born in February are getting bigger every day. Shadow is currently the leader in the "pecking order". He has been seen trying to snag the other chicken's food and the students say he is the "mastermind of the chickens in the coop". Students are enjoying time with the chickens and find it relaxing to watch them and their chicken antics.
